Grain drops into the Remote Sampling Head where it's trapped for a few seconds while light is passed through the sample. A fibre optic cable collects the transmitted light and sends it to the NIR spectrometer located inside the cabin.

A Touch Screen tablet PC, which is mounted inside the cabin, controls the system and displays the protein, oil and moisture data in real time. Data is collected every 7-12 seconds which is displayed on the Touch Screen PC showing bin averages, field averages and real-time protein maps. The software sends the data to the internet where it can be monitored using a PC, tablet or smart phone.
